Effective child management interventions are crucial tools for families who have children with behavior problems and/or children whose behaviors interfere with their ability to reach their full potential. Working in partnership with families in their own home, we develop a “team-approach” to address parent-child problems to reach parent-child solutions. The interventions we utilize are based on sound behavioral principles and include:

1. Positive Reinforcement which focuses on good behavior instead of bad behavior. Parental attention is one of the most powerful forms of positive reinforcement;

2. Redirecting which involves the simple act of redirecting a child to the appropriate behavior;

3. Verbal Instruction/Explanation which helps parents to specifically address behavior expectations to help children develop good judgment; and

4. Establishing Consistent Rules in which we help parents to identify rules, explain them to their child and assist parents in maintaining these rules consistently until their child learns to follow them on his/her own.

Families Served

We provide both clinic-based and natural-environment interventions, depending on the needs of the family and level of intensity of services. One of the unique aspects of our program is our focus on parent development and education that is age-appropriate and developmentally-appropriate for the identified child. We provide education to parents about the importance of play and relationship building, how to praise and use rewards, how to set effective limits and deal with non-compliance, and how to handle misbehavior and preventative strategies for coping with child problem behaviors.

In Iowa, we provide these services, through a Rehabilitative Treatment Supportive Services (RTSS) contract with the Iowa Department of Human Services.
